Summary

My research interests are linear algebra, numerical analysis, and partial differential equations. The core of my PhD thesis is devising and analyzing space-time spectral method for partial differential equations, with a special focus on the Stokes problem. While working on estimating condition number for matrices, the problem of deriving a non-trivial lower bound for the minimum eigenvalue of a SPD matrix expressed as a sum of two PSD matrices captured my interest. This problem further lead to new lower bounds for some block matrices. A future project includes developing a fast solver for linear systems arising from space-time spectral methods.

In addition to learning mathematics, my other passion is teaching mathematics at various levels. I have taught a second year engineering mathematical analysis course in Winter 2021, and I have been a teaching assistant for various courses for the past six years at the University of Manitoba. During this time, I also conducted several workshops for preparing students for university level mathematics, and nursing examination. And, I tutor students registered with special education programs. I love volunteering for teaching mathematics to elementary school students in Manitoba. I occasionally give free Indian classical music lessons at Gurdwara Nanaksar, Winnipeg.
